Editorial

With this winter issue our subscriptions have increased over one hundred per cent and our magazine sales have flurried to even greater heights than was anticipated.

"UFOmation" our latest book has produced more sales than we had printed. So if your copy of "UFOmation" is late it is because we have gone into a second printing (see advertisement ). 1968 "Flying Saucer Digest" will bring out (2) new books on the subject of UFO's. These fascinating books are just now in the preliminary planning stage.

This issue you will notice has two (2) new regular articles "I Met a Spaceman" and "Analysis In Astronomy". We think the people as well as the ardent UFO researcher should know a little of all facets in UFOlogy and that includes astronomy. Some time ago, the actual date eludes me, a person wrote a letter to us stating that flying saucers have no tie in or relationship with astronomy. This person wanted us to delete this portion from our "Flying Saucer Digest". I disagree. I think it's about time we started to know as much as possible about the astronomical aspects as well as the origin of the universe theory. That is why we started the new regular article "Analysis in Astronomy".

The same is true of "I Met A Spaceman." Although the contact portion of Ufology is usually left out of the deep researcher of this subject we thought it would be interesting to correlate this influx into F.S. Digest to prove our point. Our point is this. We dare not omit any idea, theory or subject from this phenomena, for fear of being as guilty as other UFO organizations who try to convince the public one way or the other. This is why our magazine is so popular with the UFO enthusiasts.

Our release dates have been changed to January, April, July and October. In the past they were December, March, June and September.

Night Creature

Since November, 1966, a mysterious creature, called "Moth Man", has terrorized the residents of Point Pleasant, West Virginia, and the surrounding area. Whether this creature is associated with UFO's or not has yet to be seen but there has been considerable saucer activity in that area.

"Moth Man" is a bird--like creature about six feet high. It's wingspan is ten feet, which gives it the ability to fly at fantastic speeds. It has a human--like body which really makes it strange.

The first report was sent in by four persons who were out for a midnight ride. They reported seeing a six foot tall creature with bright red eyes. The wings protruded from it's back and it's face was not distinguishable.

The terrified persons drove to the Point Pleasant police station at speeds up to 100 miles per hour. However, "Moth Man" flew after them, staying above the car. They could see the shadow of the bird-man on the rear window.

The witnesses stated that one time the bird-man tried to attack them and the car. It buzzed the car, making a mouse-like noise.

After reaching the station they talked the police into going back to the field with them. There, two policemen made sightings of the creature. The police went back the next day and found oval-shaped footprints  $4\frac{1}{2}$  inches across and strange animal droppings.

Later a grave-digger reported seeing something flying through the trees. He said it looked like a brown human being. It did not make any sound.

The most unusual case of this series took place four days after the initial report. It involved the disappearance of a $350 German shepherd dog and an electromagnetic effect.

Newell Partridge, a farmer, reported that his television began acting up after he noticed two bright red lights in one of his fields. When the dog saw them he too began acting up.

A few minutes later, after shining a light on to the creature, the dog tore off after it. The dog never returned. It's tracks stopped right in the middle of the field.

There are other cases of "Moth Man" and there will surely be more. There is one theory that the "Moth Man" is a UFO-naut, an occupant of a UFO. I can't really buy this. I believe in the little men stories, of humanoid beings 3½ to 5 feet tall but I can't accept any monster stories.

Strange Object

In September of 1959 a barnacle-encrusted bottle containing a note was found on a beach 100-miles south of Auckland, Australia. The note found in this old wine bottle came from the ship Joyita.

The note read "Abandoning ship. Strange circular metallic object forcing us aboard it. Help us Stewart, Joyita."

A small diagram of a Flying Saucer was also included.

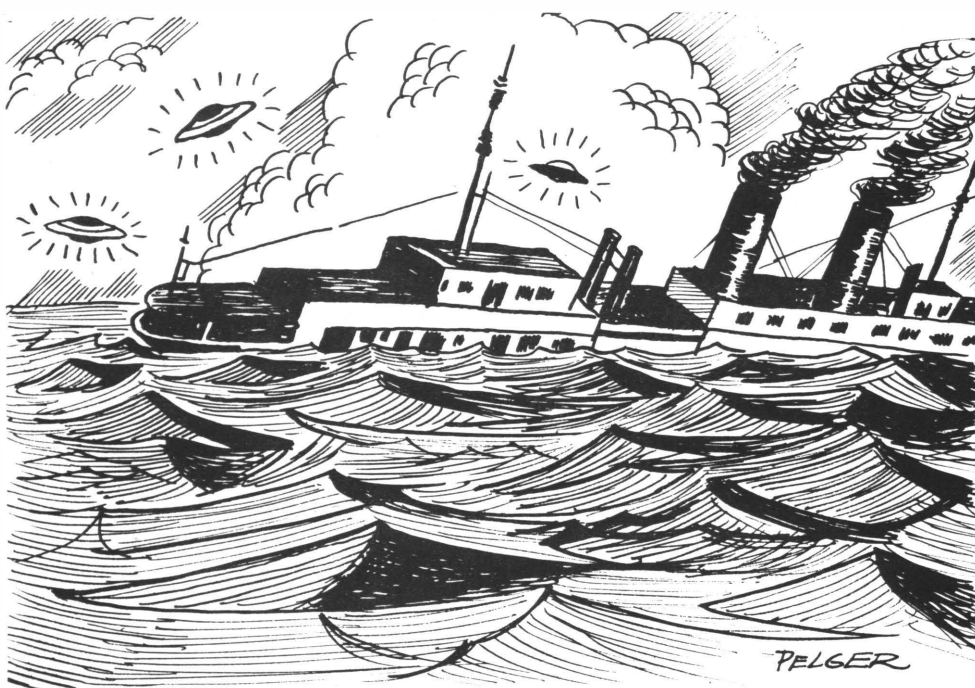

Nobody aboard the ship was named Stewart. The Joyita was reported overdue at Apia, Western Samoa, on October 7, 1955.

The abandoned wrecked ship was found a month later. There was no trace of the crew. Not one member of the crew was ever found.

The size of the barnacles showed that the bottle had been in the sea at least 2 years a conchologist at the Auckland Museum said.

These strange sightings and happenings connected with the mystery of the Unidentified Flying Objects will be in each issue of "Flying Saucer Digest".

Don't miss the next issue for another unbelievable but true account of a flying saucer incident.

Analysis in Astronomy

At a distance of 93 million miles and travelling at a speed of 12 miles per second is a huge sphere of hot fiery flame we call the Sun. Actually, the Sun, as we so term it, is merely one of billions of stars which form our galaxy. All galaxies are made up of countless numbers of stars like our Sun and vary in size to one another.

There are billions and billions of stars throughout the infinite universe which are believed to have been formed out of the gravitational contraction of huge space clouds of dust and gas.

Our Sun is about an average size star with a diameter of about 864,000 miles and a million times larger in volume than Earth. Not all stars are large. Some are even smaller than the size of our Earth and can be compared to that of our moon.

Some of the giant and super-giant stars are unbelievably enormous. For instance, the orbit of Mars would easily fit inside of of the star Antares, whose diameter is 390 times that of our Sun.

Another enormous star, Epsilon Aurigae, has a fantastic diameter of 2300 million miles. This is so huge that if our Sun were situated at the center of the star, the orbit of the planet Saturn would be located inside the star.

Imagine ! All these flaming giant suns travelling through space within various galaxies and spaced at tremendous distances. It makes one sit back and begin to think. You then wonder--how "incredibly fantastic".

UFO Retrospective

On October 1, 1948 at 9:00 PM. Lt. Gorman, flying a practice flight in a F-51 Fighter saw a fast moving light below his plane. Gorman contacted his tower at Fargo Airport for varification of landing. Then asked the tower to confirm the mystery light. Traffic Control also spotted the queer light. Lt. Gorman then dived at the light. The object made a series of turns and then Gorman pursued the object. The total time of the so-called dogfight lasted twenty minutes. All this while the Tower had the mystery light and Gorman's F-51 in view. Then the light climbed to 17,000 ft. turned to the north and disappeared.

UFO files are loaded with aircraft and mystery light contacts. UAPA files from time to time will be released in the form of "UFO Retrospective."

I Met A Spaceman

On November 20, 1952, George Adamski claimed that he engaged in a fantastic meeting with the pilot of a "space craft" in the California desert. The spaceman told Adamski via sign language that his craft (saucer shaped) had come down from a cigar shaped "mother ship" which was hovering about up above the Earths atmosphere. "Orthon", the pilots' name referred to by Adamski, said he came from the planet Venus which is very much alive and established with humanoid life as that of Earth.

There were also numerous other so-called contacts made by Adamski with a man from Mars whose name was Firkon, and Ramu who was from Saturn. These continual meetings developed into a "special treat" for this contactee, as he says he was invited aboard several flying saucers and driven through space to the Moon, Venus, Mars and many other incredible and adventurous places.

George Adamski went on to write several books about his fantastic experiences, which most researchers say is more of fiction than fact. He passed away on April 23, 1966 at the age of 74 from pneumonia which he developed while on tour lecturing about his experiences.

Where Do They Come From?

In almost every lecture that Flying Saucer Digest gives, the inevitable question is asked. "Where do you think the flying saucers come from?" My answer is sort of objective, and goes something like this--"We at the United Aerial Phenomena Agency have many varied theories as to the home-base so to speak." Before one can ask a question like this, one would have to know the various trends in sightings (flaps). One would have to know the different shape of these objects and when they are seen (report center trends) the most. For instance, in the past five years in the Cleveland area there have been many varied sightings that show a trend in shapes. Example: this year the sightings appear to be balls of light and/or discs. Late last year the objects reported seem to be the Red-Orange Light type. In 1965 there was a period of three months when the objects seen were reported as elongated lighted objects (fluorescent-tube type) which would stand at a forty-five degree angle in the sky and then fade out completely.

So, if these objects are of the same origin, "Why the different shapes? Why the different periods of flaps?" To be frank, we do not know. But we will continue to catalog these sightings and try to predict the next flux in there appearances.

If these objects are of different origins, it would explain the difference in shapes, size and movement etc. But then an even greater problem would arise.

Its hard enough to contemplate which planet or star system these UFO's come from, let alone try to figure if there are five or more different intelligences surveying our planet.

So you see, the answer to a question such as this cannot be answered so simply as the audience would like us to do. My own personal feeling seems to point or direct my thoughts to first "They come from beyond our Solar system and perhaps beyond our Universe. Second, There are more then one race of intelligences presently engaged in either surveying Earth or trying to make contact or just watching." The watching part is another subject that should be looked into at another time.

Who Said That?

It seems that since the Senate has voted to trim the Space Exploration budget to favor the Defense program by appropriating more money, articles referring to the mysteries of space have practically disappeared from technical publications and only a few have appeared in the science monthly magazines.

The few to appear will be quoted here and if the scarcity continues I will enter upon occasion to review some excellent articles from magazines of the last few years.

The development of a 36 dish radar telescope, the expansion of a new 130-ft.-diameter antenna facility into an eight-reflector array and a major modification of a 1000-ft.-diameter antenna at Aracibo, P.R., have been recommended if the U.S. is to stay competitive with Soviet astronomy.

The proposed thirty-six 85-ft. reflectors arranged in a Y formation, each leg 13 miles long would cost $52 million. The California Institute of Technology suggested the eight-antenna array.

The first 120-ft. dish is now nearly completed at a site in Owens Valley, Cal. and seven more will be added to form a T-shape array, the east-west leg extending 9000 ft. and the north-south leg 16,000 ft. Total cost would be $15 million.

Cornell University has proposed replacing the existing wire mesh of the Aracibo spherical antenna with a nearly solid reflector to improve receiving sensitivity greatly and permit Cornell was the designer of the Aracibo observatory. Electronic Design Vol.19 9/19/67

Massachusetts Institute of Technology has proposed a problem to students in a systems engineering course to test their power in the art.

"Save the world from an imminent collision with the asteroid Icarus when it swings past the Earth on June 15, 1968."

Actually by astronomical calculations, Icarus is scheduled to miss Earth by 4 million miles next year, but students were told to assume the two spheres would collide and to formulate plans how to prevent this by presenting realistic plans.

A decision would have to be made why it would be necessary to stop Icarus. In event of a collision the consequences would be catastrophic, as hypothetically mid-Atlantic would be ground zero. Tidal waves would engulf New York City, Boston and all of Florida and world-wide earthquakes would cause devastating destruction.

Students analyzed it thusly:

Side track the Apollo program and utilize nine Saturn rockets: using three launch pads for launching at least a dozen 100 megaton hydrogen bombs as well as commandeering all available telemetry and radar systems in conjunction with the Star trackers from the Orbiting Astrophysical Observatory.

The first launch would be two months before impact and the last launch, (if the eight previous attempts failed) would be one day before impact: with the intruder rushing towards Earth 77,000km/hr (18,000mph).

Four Year Space Trip

An Indian chief in full regalia told Friday how a space ship took him on a four-year flight to the edge of the galaxy.

Frank B. Standing Horse of Perris, California, told the Amalgamated Flying Saucer Clubs of America convention he touched the Moon, Mars, Clarion, and Venus, but spent most of his time in Orion, which he described as a planet on the outer edge of our galaxy and which was inhabited by a super-modernistic society.

He said his journey began July 12, 1959, near Sapulpa, Okla., at a spot where he was clearing an area for a church camp. Standing Horse who said he saw his first flying saucer in 1949 and had sighted 14 unidentified flying objects since, said a spacecraft 250 feet in diameter and 28 feet high landed during the night.

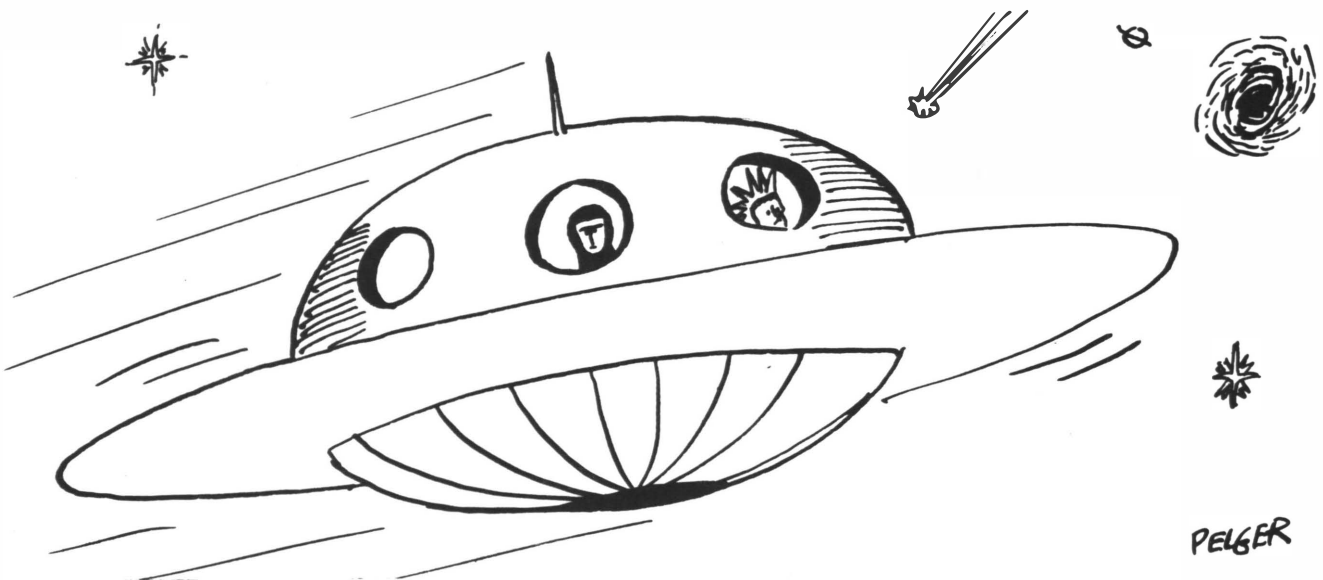

He said he talked with the crew of three men, who "looked like anyone else," and decided to go away with them "because it was a new experience for me."

Once aboard, he said, he met a beautiful lady 6 feet 4 inches tall with long black hair and blue eyes. She fed him and tucked him into bed after giving him a Olean-style kiss---Three finger taps on the cheek "which was no fun."

They landed on Mars at a building "made of rock from our moon." After eating earth-style food, they flew to the moon where he saw "people, buildings, animals, snow and ice." Then it was on to Venus for a landing in a cloudburst and a stay of 80 minutes.

Clarion was next. He didn't say much about that stop "which lasted only 28 minutes, but on Venus he said he saw a car powered by electromagnetic force and driven by a man from North Platte, Neb. He didn't identify his countrymen.

At Orion, there were beautiful buildings including churches, and life was "so different I just couldn't tell about it all here." He did remember eating delicious berries so big three of them would fill a quart jar, and said details could be heard on tape recordings available at $15 a tape.

"I wanted to stay but they wouldn't let me," he said. "I asked why they brought me to Orion and they said it was so I might know the might works of creation. They said we should stop shooting off atomic bombs because it distrubed them."

About 1,000 persons are attending the three-day convention which ends Sunday. They saw displays which included pictures purporting to show flying saucers and heard speakers tell of their experiences with ships and men from outer space.

TV And UFO's

There is no reason that those sightings of unidentified flying objects in the Midwest should cause concern among viewers who have paid careful attention to their favorite series throughout the years.

Thanks to such programs as "The Twilight Zone," "The Outer Limits" and "Lost in Space"--and also to video showings of science fiction movies made in this country and in Japan--the American public is well prepared to handle any consequence. Hollywood is proud to have done its part.

In case, however, you have forgotten some of the important lessons of these programs, it might be constructive to offer today a last-minute briefing, so to speak:

"It is very, very important--and I cannot stress this enough --to remember the lesson of the television writers that we are all brothers. Therefore, try to treat any and all visitors just the way you'd treat your visiting relatives.

The next thing to remember, if you recall your television lessons, is that just because people get around in flying saucers and look different and carry ray guns, they are not necessarily bad. They might be just as nice as we are.

Therefore, as our television educators have pointed out time and again in our series, it is probably not a good idea to shoot too quickly, or at least first. We may well be dealing with highly intelligent beings, and it is possible they have just come down (or up, as the case may be) to protest the new fall television schedule.

Continuing this briefing, I would like to remind you again of the profundity of our video writers who noted that machines like robots aren't necessarily bad either, but are only what their creators make them. Television and its artists are proud to have pointed this out. I needn't remind you, by the way, to beware if a beautiful amazon-type lady arrived from space, for if this is the case she probably has a press agent and is hooting a pilot film for a network.

There is one frank fact that must be faced. If by chance the visitor is Godzilla or somebody in that league, even the television writers agree that our good will might have to be suspended, and that pacifistic intentions will have to give way to extremism. Get the National Guard, and then call Rod Serling for further instructions.

Saucer Landing

Motorist Ronald Sullivan was cruising along in the moonlight when the beam of his head lights "bent" inexplicably to the right.

"Had I followed them I would have run off the road," he told police at Maryborough, near Melbourne.

"I managed to stop before I crashed.

"Just then I saw a display of gaseous lights in all the colours of the spectrum in a nearby field. An object rose about 10 ft. in the air --and disappeared."

Later, he returned to the scene-and found that 19-year-old motorist Gary Taylor had been killed the previous night in a crash at the same spot.

Police checked and found in a freshly ploughed field a circular depression from two to five inches in depth and about five feet in diameter.

They regard 38-year-old Sullivan as an intelligent and highly respected business man--who does not believe in flying saucers.

Metal Fall

A piece of metal which dropped from the sky and struck a tractor at North Otago has puzzled New Zealand geologists and has been sent to the United States for tests.

The owner of the property picked up the metal but found it too hot to hold.

Numerous tests have been made without discovering what the metal is.

Professor Brian Mason, a New Zealander who is meteorite expert at the New York Museum of Natural History, is now preparing a report.

The metal is a small cube, reddish-brown in colour, and with definite areas of stratification.
